A stardate is a fictional system of time measurement developed for the television and film series Star Trek. In the series, use of this date system is commonly heard at the beginning of a voice-over log entry, such as "Captain's log, stardate 41153.7. Our destination is planet Deneb IV ...". While the general idea resembles the Julian date currently used by astronomers, writers and producers ...

The stardate system used in the Star Trek franchise can sometimes feel like a random selection of numbers, but there is some degree of meaning and calculation involved. When first devising and conceptualizing the futuristic world of Star Trek, Gene Roddenberry decided that the advent of long-range space travel would necessitate a brand new way of measuring time, instead of the standard ...

My stardate calculator is based upon the Stardates in Star Trek FAQ by Andrew Main. I have, however, made a couple of different assumptions. First, and most important, is that I assumed that Stardates increased from 0 at a certain point and that they do not reset at any point. The second is that the timebase works in terms of seconds, as the second is the base unit for measuring time. In ...

Star Trek: Stardate 1999 Calendar As usual, there are six Official Pocket Books calendars to consider. Four are glossy monthlies for $12 apiece featuring shots from the various series. My favorite this year is Classic Trek, which uses gorgeous, loud neon colors on the costumes, the sets, even some of the alien skin tones.

Trek Calendars - The Little Review

In 1999, Steve Kenson wrote up an extensive article on Klingons for an RPG book to be called "Blood and Honor" for Last Unicorn Games' Star Trek RPG. That book was, in the end, never published, but Steve later released his draft online. After some time his original document was removed from his site, but copies of it (or parts of it) have been posted on various sites since.
